Macro-regional Strategy for the Carpathians - a local government perspective

Władysław Ortyl, Marshal of the Podkarpackie Region

19 November 2021
What I will talk about?

1. The specificity of the Carpathian area.
2. EU Macro-regional Strategies.
4. Cooperation within the Carpathian community.
5. Carpathian Interregional Group.
Carpathians

- A geopolitically important area - the eastern border of the European Union
- Huge potential and space for regional integration
- The area of potential development opportunities
- The Carpathians have unique endogenous resources:
  - rich biodiversity
  - high tourist attractiveness
  - cultural heritage
  - unique human resources
  - shared identity and experiences of history
Carpathians

- Czech Republic, Poland, Romania, Slovakia, Hungary
  - EU member states

- Moldova, Serbia, Ukraine
  - the candidate countries
Mountain specificity of the Carpathian area

Environmental

- "Eastern Carpathians" International Biosphere Reserve
- 36 national parks – area 11 000 km²
- 51 landscape parks – area 19 000 km²
- 200 other forms of protection
- one of the most important predator refuges
- only 16% of the area outside forms of protection

Geographical

- the topography is determined by the settlement network and spatial development, i.e. a large number of small towns in the valleys and the lack of large cities
- the mountainous area limits the possibilities of adapting the infrastructure to the needs of the inhabitants
- the need to maintain forms of nature protection
- spatial conditions hinder the development of the expected transport connections
The green lungs of Europe

- an area of 190 000 km²
- inhabited by approximately 68 million people
- the last great wilderness area in Europe
- home for large predators
- over half the population of bears, wolves and lynx on the continent
- the largest preserved virgin forest reserve
There are currently four EU macro-regional strategies:

- EU Strategy for the Baltic Sea Region (EUSBSR; 2009),
- EU Strategy for the Danube Region (EUSD; 2010),
- EU Strategy for the Adriatic and Ionian Region (EUSAIR; 2014 r.),
- EU Strategy for the Alpine Region (EUSALP; 2016).

There are also initiatives to create new strategies for the Carpathian, Atlantic, Iberian and Mediterranean regions.

Most EU Member States are included in the macro-regional strategy agenda and some EU countries are involved in several strategies.
Arguments of the Carpathian Strategy

- Growing support for the initiative to create a macro-regional strategy for the Carpathian area
- A response to the need to expand and deepen the cooperation of states and communities in the Carpathian area
- The Carpathian Strategy is a mature initiative taken at all levels of government
Strategic goals of the Carpathian Strategy

✔ Competitive Carpathians - Development of clean industries, Sustainable tourism development, Increased competitiveness of the agri-food sector, Development of a macro-regional innovation ecosystem.

✔ Green Carpathians - Protection and rational management of natural resources, Diversification of energy sources, Water reservoir, Management of environmental risks and natural hazards

✔ Coherent Carpathians - Increasing transport accessibility of the Carpathians, Increasing digital accessibility of the Carpathians, Development of e-services system

Connection of the Carpathian Strategy with the Carpathian Convention

- Need for a joint decision by the governments of the Carpathian countries
  - meetings at ministerial level
  - MEPs' activities

- Support from the European Committee of the Regions
  - debates
  - opinion in the COTER committee

- Bottom-up activities
Carpathian and Danube Strategy

- Macroregional strategies interpenetrate each other both territorially and thematically.
- The territorial impact area of the Danube Strategy is partly the area covered by the EUSALP Strategy or the EUSAIR Strategy.
- The priority areas indicated for individual macro-regional strategies contain common problem areas, the broadest scope is covered by the Danube Strategy.
- This does not result in mutual competition, but allows for a better adjustment of initiatives, programs and activities undertaken within the framework of individual strategies to the specific nature of a given territory.
- The challenge is to define the interrelationship between existing macro-regional strategies as well as with future strategies.
Cooperation within the Carpathian community

Group Goals

• Identifying possibilities for the creation of the 5th EU macro-regional strategy

• Promotion of multi-level management

• Focusing on the role of local and regional authorities to support sustainable development

• Work on and then promoting the opinion of the European Committee of the Regions on the Macroregional Strategy for the Carpathian Area

- adopted at the plenary session of the European Committee of the Regions in December 2019;
- 18 notes that the Carpathian Convention is a multi-sectoral management mechanism covering the Carpathian region that enables inter-sectoral integration and widespread participation of stakeholders from various levels (national, regional, non-governmental, etc.) The multi-level cooperation standards that have been developed and have resulted in five thematic protocols on the Carpathian Convention can be used as an important part of further cooperation;
- acknowledging the positive impact of the Carpathian Convention, the importance of its objectives and their convergence with the EU's priorities, calls on the European Commission to take action towards the EU joining this Convention as a party, and points out that the EU is already a party to the Alpine Convention.
